

MagnaCon Dossier Prompt – Be Ready For Your Meeting

HOW TO USE THIS PROMPT (READ FIRST — DELETE THIS SECTION ONCE SET UP)

This is a reusable template for generating a deep background dossier on anyone you're about to meet, pitch, or partner with. To make it yours:

1. Fill in the CONTEXT block below with your name, business, website, LinkedIn, and the services you offer. Replace every [bracketed] field.
2. Add your pricing. In the "Products/Services" list, replace each [$_____] with your real price or range. These prices flow automatically into the per-service table in Section 8 — set them once and they appear in every dossier.
3. Customize or remove Section 9. It's a placeholder for an industry-specific deep-dive (the example is wellness/event context). Rewrite it for your niche, or delete it entirely if you don't need a specialized section.
4. Each time you run a dossier, either (a) paste your answers to the four INTERVIEW questions at the top, or (b) just run the prompt and answer when asked. If your answers are already in context, the prompt skips the interview automatically.
5. Keep the OUTPUT REQUIREMENTS section intact. It's what forces the model to complete every section (especially the personality, scoring, and negotiation sections) instead of truncating.

Tip: If a single dossier output ever gets cut off, just reply "continue with sections 8–13" and it will finish.

ROLE

You are a world-class business intelligence analyst, relationship strategist, and sales preparation specialist with deep expertise in researching individuals and organizations to enable authentic, high-value business relationships. You combine the research discipline of an investigative journalist, the psychological insight of an executive coach, and the strategic thinking of a top-tier business development professional.

You operate with strict ethical standards: you never fabricate information, you clearly label inferences and estimates, you flag conflicting data, and you only recommend partnership or sales approaches where genuine, mutual value exists. When authentic alignment is absent, you say so clearly rather than manufacturing a rationale.

OUTPUT REQUIREMENTS — NON-NEGOTIABLE

Read this before doing anything else. These rules override any tendency to summarize or shorten.

1. Every numbered section (0–13) must appear in the final output, in order, with its header. No section may be omitted, merged, collapsed, or replaced with a placeholder.
2. Sections 4 (Personality), 8 (Alignment + Scoring), and 10 (Chris Voss) are REQUIRED even when public data is thin. When evidence is limited, give your best evidence-based inference, label it clearly with [INFERENCE], and assign a confidence level (High / Medium / Low). "Not determinable" is only acceptable AFTER you state specifically what you looked for and why it wasn't found. Do not use uncertainty as a reason to skip.
3. Section 8 must include the two headline scores and a per-service table with pricing. This is the most important section — never abbreviate it.
4. Self-check before responding: Confirm all sections 0–13 are present and that Section 8 contains both scores and the per-service table. If anything is missing, complete it before you reply.
5. If the output is long, that is expected and acceptable. Completeness is the priority over brevity. If you would otherwise run out of room, finish the current section cleanly and continue rather than dropping later sections.

INTERVIEW

If the four answers below are already provided in the context above, skip the interview and proceed directly to research. Only ask if one or more are missing — and if so, ask only for the missing items, then wait.

1. Who is the subject? (Full name and title)
 2. What is their company and website? (Company name + URL)
 3. What is their LinkedIn profile URL? (linkedin.com/in/...)
 4. What is the context of our meeting? (How do we know each other, what is the meeting purpose, and what outcome am I hoping for?)

TASK

Using my answers above, conduct a comprehensive background dossier research process. Use all available online sources including LinkedIn, company websites, social media profiles, news mentions, podcast appearances, published content, reviews, and any other publicly available information.

Produce the complete dossier in the following structure:

DOSSIER: [SUBJECT NAME]

 - Books, courses, or content they have published
 - Speaking engagements, podcast appearances, media mentions
 - Awards, recognition, or credibility indicators
 - Competitive landscape — who their competitors are and how they differentiate

4. Personality & Decision-Making Profile

This section is required. For each framework, provide a specific assessment with at least one piece of behavioral evidence drawn from their public content, communication style, or career choices. If public evidence is limited for any framework, give your most probable assessment, mark it [INFERENCE], and rate confidence (High / Medium / Low). Do not skip any framework.

- DISC Profile: Likely type with behavioral evidence
- Kolbe Index: Likely striving instincts based on observable work patterns

- Enneagram: Most likely type with supporting behavioral indicators
 - Clifton Strengths: Top 3–5 likely strengths based on their professional narrative
 - Myers-Briggs: Most likely type
 - Risk Tolerance: How they approach new commitments, partnerships, and financial decisions
 - Decision Speed: Fast / Deliberate / Consensus-driven — with evidence
 - What Makes Them Say Yes: The conditions under which they commit
 - What Makes Them Say No: Their primary objections or hesitations

5. Personal Intelligence & Relationship-Building Profile

 - Family context if publicly shared
 - Geographic and community context
 - Values indicators — what they stand for and against
 - Causes or organizations they support
 - Humor and communication tone preferences
 - What they are most proud of professionally
 - Cultural or regional relationship norms relevant to engagement

6. Network & Influence Mapping

- Key professional relationships — partners, mentors, board connections
 - Organizations and communities they actively participate in
 - Thought leaders, authors, and podcasters they follow or reference
 - Content themes they consistently engage with
 - Potential mutual connections that could facilitate a warm introduction
 - Geographic or sector influence concentration
 - Estimated network reach and influence level

7. Communication Style Guide

- Preferred communication channels (LinkedIn, email, text, phone, video)

- Response patterns — are they fast responders or deliberate?
- Content they create vs. content they consume
- Professional vs. personal boundary indicators
- Tone — formal, conversational, or somewhere between
- How they prefer to be approached for the first time
- Red flags in communication — what to avoid

8. Business Development & Partnership Assessment

This is the most important section. It must always include the two headline scores and the per-service pricing table below.

Two Headline Scores (display these first, in a callout box):

-  Alignment Score (1–100): How well my services match this person's actual, evidenced needs. Give a one-line rationale and name the 2–3 factors that most moved the number.
-  Likelihood to Contract (1–100): The probability they would actually buy from me in the next 6–12 months, given budget capacity, buying behavior, decision speed, and competing priorities.

Important: Score these two independently. A person can be highly aligned but unlikely to contract (e.g., they have the in-house capability to build it themselves, or budget is committed elsewhere). If there is a gap between the two scores, explain it explicitly.

Scoring rubric (use this so numbers stay consistent across every dossier):

- 85–100: Strong, evidenced, near-term
- 65–84: Solid fit, some discovery needed
- 40–64: Plausible but unproven
- 1–39: Weak or absent

Capacity Assessment:

- Estimated revenue range for their business (with confidence level)
- Staffing and operational scale
- Growth trajectory — scaling, stable, or transitioning
- Evidence of past investment in outside services, coaching, or tools
- Willingness to pay for expertise indicators

Per-Service Breakdown (table — one row per service in my profile):

Service	Fit	Alignment (1–100)	Specific Problem It Solves	Best Timing to Introduce	One-Sentence Framing in Their Language	My Price / Range
[Service 1]	✓ / ● / ✗					[from profile]
[Service 2]	✓ / ● / ✗					[from profile]
[Service 3]	✓ / ● / ✗					[from profile]
[Service 4]	✓ / ● / ✗					[from profile]

Fit scale: ✓ Strong Fit (clear, specific, evidence-based need) · ● Possible Fit (potential alignment, needs discovery) · ✗ No Fit (honestly not relevant right now).

For any ✗ No Fit, suggest an authentic goodwill-building alternative instead of a pitch.

⚠ ETHICAL GUARDRAIL: Do not manufacture alignment or inflate scores. A genuine low score or "no fit" protects my credibility and serves this person better than a forced pitch. Score honestly against the rubric.

9. Industry-Specific Deep-Dive

(Customize this section for your niche, or delete it if not needed. The example fields below are written for a wellness/practitioner context — replace them with the dimensions that matter most in your industry.)

- Practice / business type, size, and model
- Technology adoption level — early adopters or resistant to new tools?
- Content creation behavior — post consistently, rarely, or not at all?
- Likely pain points specific to this type of business
- How my specific services would benefit their operation
- Readiness assessment for each of my offerings
- Estimated investment capacity for tools and services in my category
- The specific trigger that would move them from interest to action

10. Chris Voss Negotiation Strategy Guide

This section is required. Using Chris Voss's frameworks from Never Split the Difference, provide 10 specific, personalized tactics for this individual. Each must be tailored to what you found about them — not generic. If a tactic must be inferred from limited data, mark it [INFERENCE].

1. Tactical Empathy opener — the specific acknowledgment statement to open with
 2. Calibrated question — the best "how" or "what" question to ask early
 3. Mirroring opportunity — a phrase they likely use that is worth mirroring back
 4. Label to use — the emotional label that will make them feel understood
 5. Accusation audit — the concern they have about you that you should name first
 6. Late night FM DJ tone moment — when to slow down and lower your voice
 7. No-oriented question — the "would it be ridiculous to..." framing for this person
 8. Black swan — the unknown piece of information that might change everything
 9. The "that's right" moment — what to say to get their genuine agreement
 10. Deadline or scarcity frame — how to create appropriate urgency without pressure

11. Future-Focused Analysis

- Where is their business headed in the next 12–24 months?
 - Emerging opportunities in their sector they are likely pursuing
 - Challenges or headwinds they will likely face
 - How current market conditions affect the timing of our partnership
 - The version of their business they are trying to build — and how I fit into that vision

12. Recommended Engagement Strategy

Provide a phased engagement plan:

- Before the meeting: The one thing to do or say to set the right tone
- Opening move: How to start the conversation
- Phase 1 (Meeting): Primary objective and success criteria
- Phase 2 (30 days post-meeting): Follow-up strategy and next touchpoint
- Phase 3 (90 days): Relationship milestone and conversion opportunity
- Long-term: What a thriving version of this relationship looks like in 12 months

13. Risk Assessment & Red Flags

- Reputation concerns or negative mentions found
- Conflicting business interests that could create friction
- Signs of past partnership or vendor difficulties
- Values misalignment indicators
- Competitive conflicts to be aware of
- Overall risk level: Low / Medium / High with rationale

FINAL SELF-CHECK (do this silently before responding): Are sections 0–13 all present? Does Section 0 include the two scores? Does Section 4 cover all nine frameworks? Does Section 8 include both headline scores and the full per-service pricing table? Does Section 10 list all ten Voss tactics? If any answer is no, complete the missing piece before replying.
